THE ARTICLE

A survey by Britain's Association of Teachers and Lecturers (ATL) has revealed that 58 percent of British teachers believe online plagiarism (copying work from the Internet) is a serious problem. Estimates are that over a quarter of students' work includes writing that was cut-and-pasted directly from a website. ATL general-secretary Dr Mary Bousted said: "Teachers are struggling under a mountain of cut-and-pasting to spot...plagiarism." One shocked teacher explained she had work "so blatantly cut-and-pasted that it still contained adverts from the Web page!" Dr Bousted added that putting so much emphasis on passing tests meant students were not learning. "Unsurprisingly, pupils are using all the means available to push up their coursework marks, often at the expense of any real understanding of the subjects they are studying," she said.

To tackle this issue, many high schools are trying out software that can easily spot plagiarized work. The Turnitin programme is used by universities across the world. Teachers can highlight a block of text they believe was copied and the software searches the Internet to see if it is already online. William Murray, a Turnitin spokesman, said the Internet made it easy for students to cheat. He pointed to the hundreds of sites that offer sample essays and essay-writing services. He added that students often do not know they are cheating when they copy-and-paste from the Web. This view is supported by teacher Diana Barker, who said: "I think the majority of students who engage in plagiarism do it more out of ignorance than the desire to cheat." Dr Bousted noted that: "Pupils are the real losers because they lack the skills they appear to have."

WARM-UPS

1. CHEATING: Walk around the class and talk to other students about cheating. Change partners often. After you finish, sit with your original partner(s) and share what you found out.

2. CHAT: In pairs / groups, decide which of these topics or words from the article are most interesting and which are most boring.

surveys / copying / cut and paste / struggling / Web page adverts / coursework / software / text / cheats / essay writing / ignorance / losers / lacking skills

Have a chat about the topics you liked. Change topics and partners frequently.

3. CHEATING: Talk with your partner(s) about the points below. Are they examples of cheating? Do you do any of them? Rank them: 10 = very serious, 1 = not at all serious. Change partners and share your findings.

- a. _____ looking at the answers in the back of the book
- b. _____ using an Internet essay-writing service
- c. _____ looking at the answers of the person next to you in an exam
- d. _____ copying and pasting text from an Internet site for use in your essay
- e. _____ stealing the answer key to a test from the teacher's drawer
- f. _____ asking a friend about the questions to a test they had just taken
- g. _____ sharing answers to the exam using Bluetooth
- h. _____ writing spellings and grammar rules on your arm

4. TEACHER PROBLEMS: Talk with your partner(s) about these problems teachers struggle with. Agree on the three biggest and smallest. Change partners and share your findings.

- students cheating
- in-class violence
- marking homework
- classroom noise
- technology
- too many students in a class
- discipline
- salary
- school management
- resources and materials

5. CHEAT: Spend one minute writing down all of the different words you associate with the word 'cheat'. Share your words with your partner(s) and talk about them. Together, put the words into different categories.

6. QUICK ROLE PLAY: Student A strongly believes that any student caught cheating should be expelled from school; Student B strongly believes cheating is a useful tool to have in life and should be encouraged in schools. Change partners again and talk about your roles and conversations.

HOMEWORK

1. VOCABULARY EXTENSION: Choose several of the words from the text. Use a dictionary or Google's search field (or another search engine) to build up more associations / collocations of each word.

2. INTERNET: Search the Internet and find out about plagiarism and the Turnitin software. Share what you discover with your partner(s) in the next lesson.

3. CHEATING: Make a poster about all the different ways to cheat in class or in an exam. Show your work to your classmates in the next lesson. Did you all have similar things?

4. PLAGIARISM: Write a magazine article about the effects of plagiarism. Include imaginary interviews with a school teacher and a student who cheated.

Read what you wrote to your classmates in the next lesson. Write down new words and expressions.

5. LETTER: Write a letter to the head teacher of a school. Ask her/him three questions about plagiarism in her/his school. Give her/him three suggestions on what (s)he should do to stop students from cheating. Read your letter to your partner(s) in your next lesson. Your partner(s) will answer your questions.
