The England fans booed their team off the pitch in Cape Town after a wholly unimpressive display against Algeria. The 0-0 draw means England must win their final game against Slovenia to go through to the knockout round. Fans say this was the worst England performance for many years. The English newspapers called it torture. Algerian fans were more upbeat. Their team played well and always looked the likelier to score. The Algerians looked more comfortable in possession. None of the England stars played well. Striker Wayne Rooney struggled to get the ball and rarely did anything with it. Frank Lampard's first-half attempt at goal was England's only real effort to score but that was easily caught by the goalkeeper.
